Many of you are receiving this newsletter after Memorial Day. As it goes in the US, our summers have unofficially begun with this holiday; thus grillouts, camping, and vacations are all underway. However, the roots of Memorial Day are more solemn than celebratory.

After the Civil War, several communities across the reunified union honored those who died by decorating graves, hosting civic ceremonies, and gathering for prayer and worship. One such commemoration took place on May 1, 1865, in Charleston, South Carolina. Approximately 10,000 people - most of them formerly enslaved African Americans - gathered to dedicate a cemetery where 257 Union soldiers were buried.

As a child, my parents brought me and my siblings to the graves of our family each Memorial Day weekend. In addition to bringing flowers, we also brought buckets, water, soap, and brushes. We dipped our brushes in lightly soaped water and scrubbed the headstones of our family; parents, siblings, aunts, and uncles along with the grands and greats.

While Memorial Day of Americana is rightly focused on those who died while serving our country, I was instilled with a wider and deeper reverence for the memory of those who died. The start of our summer is not only about an extra day with the weekend to kick off the summer extracurriculars but rather a day to honor the memory of those loved; the loved ones of our fallen service men and women and the loved ones who hold our memory.

“Can a woman forget her nursing child, or show no compassion for the child of her womb? Even these may forget, yet I will not forget you, says the Lord. See, I have inscribed you on the palms of my hands.” (Isaiah 49:15-16)

As we did last summer, we’ll again be worshipping outdoors on the last Sundays of June, July, and August as the weather allows. Pack your lawn chairs.

May your summer be one of blessing and peace.

Tornado Safety

further weather information. Watch the weather and be prepared to take shelter immediately if conditions worsen.

· A tornado warning means that a tornado has been sighted or indicated by weather radar. You should immediately take shelter during a tornado warning.

NOAA Weather Radios
NOAA weather radios remain the best way to receive warnings from the National Weather Service. By using a NOAA weather radio, you can receive continuous updates on all the weather conditions in your area.

The National Weather Service recommends buying a radio with a battery backup (in case the power goes off) and a tone-alert feature that automatically sounds when a weather watch or warning is issued.

Learn about the tornado warning system of your county or locality. Most tornado-prone areas have an outdoor siren system. Know how to distinguish between the siren's warnings for a tornado watch and a tornado warning.

Wireless Emergency Alerts (WEAs) are another method to stay up to date on weather emergencies. WEAs are emergency messages sent by authorized government authorities, such as the National Weather Service, through your mobile carrier. The alerts look like a text message and typically show the type and time of the alert, any action you should take, and the agency issuing the alert. For more information, visit the National Weather Service website.

Identify the safest place to take shelter.

Although there is no completely safe place during a tornado, some locations are safer than others. Safe places include:

- A storm cellar
- A basement
- And inside room without windows on the lowest floor (such as a bathroom, closet, or center hallway)
- If you live in a mobile home, identify a nearby building you can get to quickly. Don't stay in a mobile home during a tornado. If you live in a tornado-prone

One of the featured education pieces on the CDC website is tornado safety. I thought it would be a good reminder.

Know the signs of a tornado.

Some tornadoes strike quickly without time for a tornado warning, so it is important to know the signs of a tornado. Signs that a tornado may be approaching include the following:

- Rotating funnel-shaped cloud
- Approaching cloud of debris
- Dark or green-colored sky
- Large, dark, low-lying cloud
- Large hail
- Loud roar that sounds like a freight train

If you notice any of these signs take cover immediately and stay tuned to local radio and TV stations, a NOAA weather radio, or the internet.

Tornadoes often accompany thunderstorms. When there are thunderstorms in your area, turn on your radio or TV to get the latest emergency information from local authorities or check your mobile phone for weather alerts. Pay close attention to changing weather conditions when there is a severe thunderstorm watch or warning.

- A severe thunderstorm watch means severe thunderstorms are possible in your area.
- A severe thunderstorm warning means severe thunderstorms are occurring in your area.

· A tornado watch means that a tornado is possible. A tornado watch is issued when weather conditions favor the formation of tornadoes. During a tornado watch, you should: Stay tuned to local radio and TV stations, a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Weather Radio, or your mobile phone for

FIRESIDE ROOM NEEDS:

We are looking to replace the folding chairs with regular dining room chairs. There are three round tables, so 12 chairs. Two of the folding chairs have been replaced and only need 10 chairs. Anyone have any unused chairs to donate? The decorating style is eclectic, chairs do not need to match but would like wooden chairs. Contact the church office or just bring to the Fireside room!

PARISH NURSE ARTICLE CONTINUED:

area, encourage your mobile home community to build a tornado shelter.

Plan ahead

1. Create a tornado emergency plan. Take a few minutes to develop a tornado emergency plan.
2. Identify a safe place in your home for household members and pets to gather during a tornado.
3. Make sure everyone understands the tornado warning system in your area.
4. Teach your family how to administer basic first aid, how to use a fire extinguisher, and how and when to turn off water, gas, and electricity in your home.
5. Learn the emergency dismissal policy for your child's school.
6. Sketch a floor plan of your home or walk through each room and discuss where and how to seek shelter.
7. Identify a second way to exit from each room or area. If you need special equipment, such as a rope ladder, mark where it is located.
8. Mark where your first-aid kit and fire extinguishers are located.
9. Mark where the utility switches or valves are located so they can be turned off (if time permits) during an emergency.

Prepare your children.

Make sure your children know:

- What a tornado is
- What tornado watches and warnings are
- What county or parish they live in (warnings are issued by county or parish)
- How to take shelter, whether at home or at school

Extra measures for people with functional needs: Write down your specific needs, limitations, capabilities, and medications. Keep this list near you always—perhaps in your purse or wallet.

Find someone nearby (such as a spouse, roommate, friend, neighbor, relative, or co-worker) who will agree to assist you in case of an emergency. Give them a copy of your list. You may also want to provide a spare key to your home, or directions to find a key.

Practice your emergency plan.

Conduct drills and ask questions to make sure your loved ones remember information on tornado safety, particularly how to recognize hazardous weather conditions and where to take shelter.

Get rid of hazards inside and outside your home

The following suggestions will reduce the risk for injury during or after a tornado. However, no amount of preparation will eliminate every risk.

Inspect your home for possible hazards.

Inspect your home for possible hazards. Address these questions:

- Are walls securely bolted to the foundation?
- Are wall studs attached to the roof rafters with metal hurricane clips, not nails?
- Are chairs or beds near windows, mirrors, or large pictures?
- Are heavy items stored on shelves more than 30 inches high?
- Are there large, unsecured items that might topple over or fall?
- Are poisons, solvents, or toxic materials stored safely?

For more information, please see the CDC website. Have a blessed and safe summer.
